M. W. REIVE, Manager

Eagle Lake

On Saturday morning last, death claimed a victim in the person of our much esteemed friend and neighbor, Mrs. Samuel Watt, daughter of Mrs. Birchall. The deceased lady had been confined to her bed for nearly three months and as the end drew near suffered intense pain without murmur or complaint. She enjoyed the affection of a wide circle of friends, who watched faithfully at her bedside during her illness. She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband, four small children, her widowed mother and one sister, Mrs. Chas. Roberts. Her father predeceased her twenty-one years ago. Interment took place in the Haliburton cemetery Monday afternoon. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved ones.

"No, sah, white folks. Ise want be satisfied with no fifteen hundred. Ise not gwine ter settle 'les I gits a thousand dollars!"

What a Live Community Means

Rights of Publication held by THE MINDEN ECHO.

A live, growing, aggressive community is one that takes patriotic pride in its own local enterprises and patronizes them to the fullest possible extent.

Here the local merchants, with cheerful confidence, stock up with an abundance of every requisite for use in the community—because they can depend upon the people of that community to do their buying from the home merchants. This makes for mutually helpful, congenial relations, moderate prices and healthy trading conditions.

In such a community you will find active interest in all public affairs. There are good schools and churches, social advantages, sport and entertainment for young and old.

Advancement is the order of the day;
progress is the watchword, and achievement is the realization that carries the spirit of the people to greater, grander goals.

Such is the community that is harkened to with attention and respect when it has something to lay before the legislative bodies or the directors of commercial corporations.

It is a "live-wire" community in the real sense of that oft-abused term, and it turns out boys and girls reared in an environment whose atmosphere breathed inspiration and whose precepts spelled success.

That is what is meant to have a com-

The community lacking this spirit, this character, will dwindle and die of stagnation.

Every dollar sent away to enrich some great metropolitan centre at the expense of local enterprises assists just that much in the work of devastation.

Community duty is the running-mate of development.

It precedes and is synonymous with the blossoming out of every successful commercial centre in America. It means more wealth to a country than the discovery of gold; its rays are warmer than radium; it outshines the diamond and flows smoother than oil.

Every dollar spent at home—and kept within the community as long as possible—enriches the country two-fold. In the first place your home-spent dollar performs an essential, patriotic duty to the primitive source of its birth—production—and the community reaps its just measure of benefit. In the second place, when your home-spent dollar is finally called upon in the exigencies of greater commerce, to roam elsewhere, its mission is one of necessity and it performs its second duty—the duty of wise economy toward the nation, and it sends home interest or its investment abroad.

While the interests of the community and the nation are mutual, your first duty is to your own community. The more the community is enriched the more the nation is enriched; because, as has been pointed out, the nation is an unknown quantity without the community.

BEST TOOLS FOR GARDEN

Laying Hens Are More Profitable Than Ever.

Frequent Change of Pasture Protects Lambs from Disease and Ensures Steady Gains—Annual Pasture
Has Proven Satisfactory.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

MOST gardeners use a hoe, rake, spade, and digging fork in their gardens. The three last are used chiefly during spring preparation of the soil and again in the fall during the harvesting of the crop. The hoe, however, is used almost all summer.

Most people in buying tools simply take what is offered, never considering that in using the heavier types sold in many stores much energy is spent in handling these, that could be used more profitably in doing other garden work. Besides, it is expected that women and children will do much of the garden work this season and it is necessary to give them implements suited to their strength.

For these reasons it has been urged on the gardeners to buy a hoe called the triangle, onion or beet hoe, with a cutting edge 4 1/4 inches wide.
This hoe is light to handle and does very satisfactory work, especially close in around the plants in the row. With it should be used the "Bucco" type of cultivator with the two outside tynes removed. These two tools will do better work than any of the ordinary hoes with a great deal less expenditure of strength and in shorter time.

Where one has a larger garden, say 60 x 100 feet, it will be well to invest in a wheel hoe to help out the two above-mentioned tools. With the "Bucco" to make a deeper mulch after a heavy rain or continuous trampling over the soil, the small hoe for close weeding, the wheel hoe makes it much easier to maintain a good mulch during the dry season, thus conserving moisture and advancing plant growth.—A. H. MacLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

HOT WEATHER: POULTRY CALENDAR.

The hen that laid 123 eggs in 1917 made the same profit as the 123-egg hen in 1914.

The hen that laid less than 123 eggs in 1917 made a smaller profit than in 1914.

The hen that laid more eggs than 123 in 1917 made a larger profit than in 1914.

In view of the high price of feed can the farmer afford to keep the poor-laying hens in 1918?

The rooster, unless kept for next year's breeding, is too expensive a luxury to keep—and he'll help relieve the meat shortage.

The market for the cull stuff promises to be good this month—and by marketing in June the distribution is more equalized.

The good layer of the yellow-legged breeds at this season loses the color from the feet and bill and these later becoming almost white. The sleek plumaged, fat yellow-legged hens are usually very poor layers. It will pay to cull them out now.

The abdominal cavity, or the space between the pelvic bones (situated under the tail) and the end of the breast or keel bones should be relatively soft and flexible. If it is full of hard fat the hen is usually a very poor layer.

As a rule the earlier matured pullets are the earlier and the flocks "go to" earlier. Breeding stock may be secured. The male may be secured in very many cases in Ontario, from eggs secured by children taking part in school fairs.

Watch the school fair winners this year.

It saves work to let the hens feed themselves—a hopper may be built at home without great expense.

Keep hens that lay over 100 eggs yearly and feed them carefully; kill the rooster and sell infertile eggs; gather the eggs daily and keep in a cool place in clean baskets; send the eggs to market quickly and regularly.—Prof. W. R. Graham.

Summer Forage for Lambs.

Frequent change of pasture is beneficial to, and relished by, all classes of stock and this applies with special emphasis to the case of sheep.
It is true for two reasons. Sheep are subject to parasitic disease which may be prevented to a large extent by not pasturing on any one area for too great a length of time. In addition to this they are possibly more fastidious about their food than some other farm animals. It is not practicable on every farm to arrange for a succession of pastures during the grazing season. However, the same area will sustain considerable more sheep if such an arrangement is feasible. Rye sown early in the fall furnishes a good deal of pasture in the late fall and early spring. After the rye is eaten off in the spring rape may be sown on this land and will come along for pasture in June or July. Alfalfa and red clover are satisfactory pasture crops and will serve until the rape is ready. An annual pasture consisting of one-bushel each of wheat, oats and barley together with eight pounds of red clover provides a good pasture for the early summer months, and the clover coming along in the autumn will give a nice picking. This annual pasture may be sown any time early in May.
Without a great deal of additional labor it is possible to have a succession of crops ready for seeding throughout the entire season. The increase in health and condition of the flock will amply repay any outlay of time and expense.—J. P.
Sackville, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College.

Preparing for Gardening.
This month begins the active gardening work. Hotbeds should be made and the seed of the early plants like cabbage, cauliflower, early celery, early beets, and the long season plants like tomatoes, egg plants and peppers should be started. Many of these seeds for small gardening work may be started inside which will relieve the necessity of making hotbeds until the first part of next month.
Manure for top dressing the ground may be hauled out the latter part of this month.

Hints For the Poultryman.

The flock should be given the opportunity to get out of doors and exercise on fine days. Begin to make preparation for hatching. Clean up the incubators and brooders, get boxes ready for setting hens. Do not set hens in the laying pens where other birds are running. If you want to raise more than 150 chickens consider the use of a good incubator and brooder. Usually chickens of the general purpose breeds hatched during the last week of March make the best winter layers. Where using hens for hatching dust them well with some good insect powder before setting, and again about two weeks later.

Just His Luck.

"So you're going home?" said the old man to the wanderer.

"Yes; tomorrow."

"I understand they are preparing the street for you?"

"Not my luck. The door is made out all but for me."

A PROMINENT NURSE SPEAKS.

Many Nurses in Canada and Elsewhere Say the Same.

Chatham, Ont.—"Being a nurse I have had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription quite a lot. I always recommend it to my patients and it has been a wonderful help to many of them. I never knew of a case where it failed. I have a patient who is using it now and she is doing fine since taking it. I have taken it myself and got the very best results. I consider it the best medicine there is to-day for women who are ailing."—Mrs. EDITH MOORE, 30 Degge St., Chatham, Ont.

THAT WEAK BACK

Accompanied by pain here and there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells, chills or spasms—all are signs of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nerve prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases in the past 50 years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps. Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion.

Monte swung open the door.
"Come in," he said.
"I thought I'd like to talk with you, if it isn't too late," explained Peter nervously.
"On the contrary, you couldn't have come more opportunely. I was just thinking about you."
He led Peter to a chair.
"Sit down and make yourself comfortable."
Monte lighted a cigarette, sank into a near-by chair, and waited.
"Beatrice said she told you," began Peter.
"She did," answered Monte; "I'd congratulate you if it wouldn't be so manifestly superfluous."
"I didn't realize she was an old friend of yours."
"I've known her for ten years," said Monte.
"It's wonderful to have known her as long as that. I envy you."
"That's strange, because I almost envy you."
Peter laughed.
"I have a notion I'd be worried if you weren't already married, Covington."
"Worried?"
"I think Mrs. Covington must be a good deal like Marjory."
"She is," admitted Monte.
"So, if I hadn't been lucky enough to find you already suited, you might have given me a race."
"You forget that the ladies themselves have some voice in such matters," Monte replied slowly.
"I have better reasons than you for not forgetting that," answered Peter.
Monte started.
"I wasn't thinking of you," he put in quickly. "Besides, you didn't give Marjory a fair chance. Her aunt had just died, and she—well, she has learned a lot since then."
"She has changed!" exclaimed Peter.
"I noticed it at once; but I was almost afraid to believe it. She seems staid—more serious."
"Yes."
"You've seen a good deal of her recently?"
"For the last two or three weeks," answered Monte.
"You don't mind my talking to you about her?"
"Not at all."
"As you're an old friend of hers, I feel as if I had the right."
"Go ahead."
"It seems to me as if she had suddenly grown from a girl to a woman. I saw the woman in her all the time. It—it was to her I spoke before. Maybe, as you said, the woman wasn't quite ready."
"I'm sure of it."
"You speak with conviction."
"As I told you, I've come to know her better these last few weeks than ever before. I've had a chance to study her. She's had a chance, too, to study—other men. There's been one in particular."
Peter straightened a bit.
"One in particular?" he demanded aggressively.
"No one you need fear," replied Monte. "In a way, it's because of him that your own chances have improved."
"How?"
"It has given her an opportunity to compare him with you."
"Are you at liberty to tell me about him?"
"Yes; I think I have that right," replied Monte. "I'll not be violating any confidences, because what I know about him I know from the man himself. Furthermore, it was I who introduced him to her."
"Oh—a friend of yours."
"Not a friend, exactly; an acquaintance of long standing would be more accurate. I've been in touch with him all my life, but it's only lately I've felt that I was really getting to know him."
"Is he here in Nice now?" inquired Peter.
"No," answered Monte slowly. "He went away a little while ago. He went suddenly—God knows where. I don't think he will ever come back."
"You can't help pitying the poor devil if he was fond of her," said Peter.
"But he wasn't good enough for her. It was his own fault too, so he isn't deserving even of pity."

"Probably that makes it all the harder. What was the matter with him?"
"He was one of the kind we spoke of the other night—the kind who always sits in the grandstand instead of getting into the game."
"Pardon me if I'm wrong, but—I thought you spoke rather sympathetically of that kind the other night."
"I was probably reflecting his views," Monte parried.
"That accounts for it," returned Peter. "Somehow, it didn't sound consistent in you. I wish I could see your face, Covington."
"We're sitting in the dark here," answered Monte.
"Go on."
"Marjory liked this fellow well enough because—well, because he looked more or less like a man. He was big physically, and all that. Besides, his ancestors were all men, and I suppose they handed down something."
"What was his name?"
"I think I'd rather not tell you that. It's of no importance. This is all strictly in confidence."
"I understand."
"So she let herself see a good deal of him. He was able to amuse her. That kind of fellow generally can entertain a woman. In fact, that is about all they are good for. When it comes down to the big things, there isn't much there. They are well enough for the holidays, and I guess that was all she was thinking about. She had had a hard time, and wanted amusement. Maybe she fancied that there was all she ever wanted; but—well, there was more in her than she knew herself."
"A thousand times more!" exclaimed Peter.
"She found it out. Perhaps, after all, this fellow served his purpose in helping her to realize that."
"Perhaps."
"So, after that, he left."
"And he cared for her?"
"Yes."
"Poor devil!"
"I don't know," mused Monte. "He seemed, on the whole, rather glad that he had been able to do that much for her."
"I'd like to meet that man some day. I have a notion there is more in him than you give him credit for, Covington."
"I doubt it."
"A man who would give up her—"
"She's the sort of woman a man would want to do his level best for," broke in Monte. "If that meant giving her up—if the fellow felt he wasn't big enough for her—then he couldn't do anything else, could he?"
"The kind big enough to consider that would be big enough for her," declared Peter.
Monte drew a quick breath.
"Do you mind repeating that?"
"I say the man really loving her who would make such a sacrifice comes pretty close to me assuring up to her standard."
"I think he would like to hear that. You see, it's the first real sacrifice he ever undertook."
"It may be the making of him."
"Perhaps."
"He'll always have her before him as an ideal. When you come in touch with such a woman as she—you can't lose, Covington, no matter how things turn out."
"I'll tell him that too."
"It's what I tell myself over and over again. To-day—well, I had an idea there must be some one in the background of her life I didn't know about."
"You'd better get that out of your head. This man isn't even in the background, Noyes."
"I'm not so sure. I thought she seemed worried. I tried to make her tell me, but she only laughed. She'd face death with a smile, that woman. I got to thinking about it in my room, and that's why I came down here to you. You've seen more of her these last few months than I have."
"Not months; only weeks."
"And this other—I don't want to pry into her affairs, but we're all just looking to her happiness, aren't we?"
"Consider this other man as dead and gone," cut in Monte. "He was lucky to be able to play the small part in her life that he did pay."
"But something is disturbing her. I know her voice; I know her laugh. If I didn't have those to go by, there'd be something else. I can feel when she's herself and when she isn't."
Monte grasped his chair arms. He had studied her closely the last few days, and had not been able to detect the fact that she was worried. He had thought her gayer, more light-hearted, than usual. It was so that she had held herself before him. If Peter was right, and Monte did not doubt the man's superior intuition, then obviously she was worrying over the technicality that still held her a prisoner. Until she was actually free she would live up to the letter of her contract. This would naturally tend to strain her intercourse with Peter. She was not one to take such things lightly.
Monte crossed the room, and placed his hand on Peter's shoulder.
"I think I can assure you," he said slowly, "that if there is anything bothering her now, it is nothing that will last. All you've got to do is to be patient and hold on."

"You seem to be mighty confident."
"If you knew what I know, you'd be confident too."
Peter frowned.
"I don't like discussing these things, but—they mean so much."
"So much to all of us," nodded Monte. "Now, the thing to do is to turn in and get a good night's sleep. After all, there is something in keeping normal."

CHAPTER XXI. Back to Schedule

Monte rose the next morning to find the skies leaden and a light, drizzling rain falling that promised to continue all day. It was the sort of weather that ordinarily left him quite helpless, because, not caring for either bridge or billiards, nothing remained but to pace the hotel piazza—an amusement that under the most favorable conditions has its limitations. But to-day—even though the rain had further interfered with his arrangements by making it necessary to cancel the trip he had planned for Marjory and Peter to Cannes—the weather was an inconsequential incident. It did not matter greatly to him whether it rained or not.
This morning Marjory would persevere remain indoors, and so if he went to see her it was doubtful whether he would be interfering with any plans she might have made for Peter. An hour was all he needed—perhaps less. This would leave the two the remainder of the day free—and, after that, all the days to come. There would be hundreds of them—all the days of the summer, all the days of the fall, all the days of the winter, and all the days of the spring; then another summer, and so a new cycle full of days twenty-four hours long.
Out of these he was going to take one niggardly hour. Nor was he asking that little for his own sake. Eager as he was—as he had been for two weeks—for the privilege of just being alone with her, he would have foregone that now, had it been possible to write her what he had to say. In a letter it is easy to leave unsaid so many things. But he must face her leaving the same things unsaid, because she was a woman who demanded that a man speak what he had to say man-fashion. He must do that, even though there would be little truth in his words. He must make her believe the lie. He cringed at the word. But, after all, it was the truth to her. That was what he must keep always in mind. He was only to help her keep her own conception. He was coming to her, not in his proper person, but as just Monte. As such he would be telling the truth.

THE MAN WHO BLOCKED U-BOATS

VICE-ADMIRAL SIR ROGER J. B. KEYES, C.M.G., D.S.O.

Made Record in Boxer Rebellion and Decoyed German Cruisers Early In the War.

Roger Keyes is his name, Vice-Admiral Roger John Brownlow Keyes, and he found fame by raiding Zeebrugge and Ostend with the gallant Dover patrol.
He is young as Vice-Admirals go, only 45, and he has the vigor and air of youth. Years ago when the Boxer rebellion in China was at its height and it was as much as a white man's life was worth to show his face inland he took a couple of destroyers up the Yang-Tse-Hei and boarded and captured four Chinese torpedo boats. Then he landed with about a dozen men, seized a Chinese fort which threatened trouble and despite the garrison blew the place up and withdrew his little party without a single casualty.
That is one of the reasons his capabilities are so highly thought of. That and the fact that he is a leader, who even in the British navy, where the standard of energy and courage is high, has always been noted for his combination of coolness and extraordinary daring.
Served in Africa.
As a midshipman he served in one of England's petty wars in Africa. As a lieutenant he leaped into fame by his conduct during the Boxer rebellion. Of him it might be said that he has done nothing without putting forth all his strength, and that, like his immortal predecessor, Nelson, he has always counted nothing done while aught remains to do.
For his services in China Liout, Keyes was promoted to the rank of Commander, was mentioned in despatches and received the praise of the Admiralty. A few weeks later he again distinguished himself by diving from a height of thirty feet into the Peiho to save a midshipman from drowning.

In the years before the present war he specialized as a submarine and torpedo officer, and for his daring and enterprise was chosen to command the British submarines. In the operations against the German high seas fleet carried out by the British navy on August 28, 1914, he was once more conspicuous. Hoisting his flag as Commodore in the Lurcher he set out with eight submarines which were used as bait to decoy the Germans out.

Trap Proved Great Success.

The trap worked so successfully that the German light cruisers Ariadne, Mainz and Koeln were sunk with a loss to the enemy in killed or drowned which was probably 800. Other German warships and destroyers were severely punished, and any attack by German ships on the British transports which were then conveying large reinforcements to France was prevented.

Commodore Keyes was again foremost in the air attack on Cuxhaven which was attempted by British sea-planes on Christmas, 1914, when some damage was done to the enemy and great alarm was caused in Hamburg and Bremen. He went to the Dardanelles when the Government decided to attempt the forcing of the passage and there he served as chief of staff to Vice-Admiral Sir Michael de Robeck.

In 1917, after his promotion to Rear

Vice-Admiral Sir Roger Keyes of Ostend-Zeebrugge Fame.

Admiral, he was appointed director of plans at the Admiralty, a position for which his strong liking for the strenuous offensive fitted him peculiarly. He did excellent work in that position, but his professional qualities and his special aptitude for executive work led to his appointment at the end of last year to the command as Vice-Admiral at Dover.

Results are Far Reaching.

It is not permissible to state what the material results of this change have been, but they have been important and far reaching. It can only be said that his unremitting efforts have made the Straits of Dover less pleasant than ever to the German submarines and thus greatly hampered their campaign against the Allies.
Admiral Keyes has always been unsparing of himself. The heroic fighting men who man the drifters on the Channel anti-submarine guard are all the better at their work because they know that there is no danger of theirs he does not eagerly share.

FIGHTERS ARE FATALISTS.

Conditions of Life at the Front Tend To Make Him One.

In every true fighter there is a deep feeling of fatalism at the bottom of his heart, and in studying a little closer his daily life this will not surprise us. His conditions of life are quite different; he does not live in a house any more, but in caves, in deep dugouts which are considered as a kind of palace. Most of the time he dwells in a hole dug in the parapet of the trench if not in a shell hole filled with a liquid sort of mud. His brains, his activities are not employed as they used to be; were he a farmer or a clerk; a dockerman or a teacher, a rich man or a poor man, he will dig trenches and again dig trenches. He will have but one single idea—kill the boche and not be killed by him. Thus he has been transplanted from his habits as a civilian, from his ordinary conditions of living, torn away from his family, from his sphere, from his society, and he is obliged to bend both body and mind to these new conditions. The feeling that this appalling sort of life cannot be changed, that nothing can be done to induce him to lead a more normal sort of life, will work on him and give him the first touch of fatalism. If he be in the trenches this feeling will become an all-powerful one. There he will have to live in such startling conditions, amid such a gigantic uproar, with such a tremendous commotion that he will feel himself a poor wretched little creature at a loss. What is he to become in the midst of the fray, with shells exploding all around him with a startling noise? He is perfectly aware that the tenth, nay the hundredth part of the explosive contained in the shell would suffice to disable him. He is perfectly aware that one of these shell splinters which are buzzing all around him would, if it hit him, injure him seriously if not kill him. He also constantly hears the cracking of bullets which pass close to him. And though he was not killed and come out of the fray unhurt, how does he explain this? Because his hour has not come yet. On the other hand, he sees a well aimed German missile play great havoc in the billets close to the front among the men who came back unhurt after having delivered a very dangerous assault.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding tissue.

A small bottle of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's foot.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezone for you from his wholesale drug house.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

About the House

INSTEAD OF SUGAR.

Every Canadian is urged by the Food Board to enlist in the campaign to save sugar. As a nation we have always used more sugar than we really needed. This awakening to the use of other forms of sweet in our diet and cooking will not injure our health and will be of great service to our Allies.

Among the sugar substitutes we have the syrups which include molasses, corn and maple syrups; honey; maple sugar; dried fruits which include figs, raisins, dates and prunes; jams, preserves, jellies and sweet canned fruits with their juices.

Corn syrups, molasses and honey all contain about four-fifths sugar and one-fifth water so that in using any of these we obtain about four spoonful of sugar from five spoonfuls of syrup but as the syrup contains moisture, more flour must be used or an equal amount of a flour, such as barley flour, which takes up more moisture.

In substituting corn syrup in a recipe calling for all sugar, we may use one-half syrup and one-half sugar by deducting one-quarter cupful of amount of liquid in original recipe, for each cup of substituted syrup.

In preserving, part syrup gives excellent results and manufacturers assert it is superior to all sugar. One part of syrup and three parts of sugar is the best proportion although equal parts are often used; this reduces the consumption of sugar one-third or one-half.

Unfortunately the cost of the substitutes is so high at the present time that it does not lessen the cost of a recipe to use them in place of sugar but it is our patriotic duty now to do so.

We can easily do without sweet drinks, candy, sugar frostings and sugar on our cereals.

The following suggested desserts require little sugar and should find a place in our menus at this time:

Baked apples with raisins or dates. Apple dumplings (made of wheat substitute such as barley flour) sauce sweetened with honey or molasses.

Gelatin desserts with fruit juices and canned fruits.

Jellies or blancmange with coconut or jam.

Cornstarch puddings with dried fruit or canned fruit, and sweetened with fruit juices.

Shortcakes (made of wheat substitutes such as barley flour) with canned or dried fruits.

Steamed puddings with molasses or corn syrup.

Gingerbread with cream cheese.

Raisin or brown breads with cream cheese.

Hot barley biscuit and honey.

Ice cream made with sweetened fruit juices and served with maple syrup, honey or marmalades.

Lemon Pie with Corn Syrup.—1 cupful corn syrup, 1 cupful milk, 3 tablespoonfuls cornstarch, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoonful orange juice, 2 tablespoonfuls lemon juice, grated lemon rind, pinch salt.

Cook the milk, syrup and cornstarch in a double boiler for fifteen minutes; add the well-beaten yolks of eggs and stir until smooth. Add the orange and lemon juice and grated rind, salt and cook a minute longer. Bake one crust of pastry on the bottom of the inverted tin and when done, place in tin and fill with the lemon mixture. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff and put on top of the pie. Set in a hot oven to brown the meringue quickly. If the oven is not hot, the meringue will be tough. Part corn meal may be used in the pastry.

Plain Ice Cream with Corn Syrup.—1 quart plain cream or 1 quart plain custard, 1 cupful corn syrup (white), 1 teaspoonful vanilla. Either the cream or a plain custard makes a nice cream. Add the corn syrup to the cream or if a custard is used, add to the cold custard, also the vanilla. Freeze and serve with nuts, fruit or chocolate sauce.

Corn Syrup Steamed Pudding.—½ cupful butter substitute, ½ cupful suet, 1 cupful corn syrup, 1 egg, 2½ cupfuls flour (substitute part barley, corn or rice flour), 2 teaspoonfuls baking powder, 1 cupful currants, 4 tablespoonfuls cornstarch, ¼ teaspoonful grated nutmeg, 2 teaspoonfuls cinnamon, 1 cupful raisins. Mix the shortening and corn syrup together, wash the fruit and add to the flour which has been sifted with the cornstarch, spices and baking powder. Add the wet materials to the dry, beat hard, pour into well-greased molds and steam three hours.

Corn Syrup Buckwheat Cookies.—½ cupful fat, 1 cupful corn syrup, 1 egg, ½ teaspoonful baking powder, 1 teaspoonful cinnamon, 1 teaspoonful cloves, ½ teaspoonful salt, 2½ cupfuls buckwheat flour. Cream the fat, add the corn syrup then the well-beaten egg. Sift the dry materials together and add to the wet. Roll the dough thin, cut in shapes with a cutter and bake in a moderate oven.

Corn Syrup Spice Cake.—1 cupful corn syrup, 1 cupful brown sugar, ½ cupful cooking oil, 1 cupful coffee, 2 eggs, 2 teaspoonfuls cinnamon, grated rind of one lemon, ½ grated nutmeg, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 teaspoonful soda, 3 cupfuls flour (one barley, two of wheat), 1 teaspoonful ginger. Mix the corn syrup, sugar and oil, then heat the mixture; add the well-beaten eggs and beat thoroughly. Add the hot coffee and the dry materials sifted together. Mix quickly until smooth, add the grated rind of lemon, turn into a well-greased loaf-cake pan and bake in a very moderate oven thirty or forty minutes.

cation it is enough to say that wherever one finds detachments of Canadian soldiers in either France or England there one finds the khaki colleges. This may be in training divisions, convalescent homes, in rest billets or even in hospitals.

Meets an Urgent Need.

One of the inspiring things in this movement is the fact that the men themselves asked for these classes. The demand was nothing less than the hunger cry which goes up from a clean, healthy mind in a clean, healthy body. Thanks to the modern way of holding on to our men, even in the trenches, there has been no lack of safeguarding the men mentally, morally and physically. For the most part the subjects taught are what the men have asked for. The idea of the colleges belongs to no one person, especially, as it occurred to a number on both sides of the Atlantic, both in and out of the Army. The final arrangements were made when Lieut.-Col. G. W. Birks visited Canada last winter. The only steps necessary seem to be first of all to procure the instructors, decide on the subjects, advertise the classes and enroll the students.

Colleges are now located in Witley, Seaford, Bramshott and Shorncliffe. There are no traditions and no formal limit to subjects nor to a particular stage in the instruction. The beginner may enter a class suited to him while the man who has begun an academic course on this side may continue and eventually complete his course over there. By standardizing libraries, of which each college has one, and the courses of instruction it is possible for a man to begin a course at Bramshott, continue it in France, resume (after having been wounded) at Epsom convalescent camp and complete his course after having returned to Bramshott. Registration is constantly increasing. The first college opened at Witley last September and 235 students enrolled after Christmas.

Classes for Everybody.

Men are already asking for new subjects and for new classes in old subjects. The first class formed was under Captain MacKinnon who is an enthusiast in the teaching of history. To-day there are classes in both ancient and modern languages, mathematics, history, engineering and political economy, for those taking university work. In addition there are classes for men who are deficient in the three R's and the beauty of it all is that a man may enter the class suited to his ability. There are two exceedingly popular departments—business and agriculture. Penmanship, business English, typewriting, bookkeeping, commercial law, commercial geography and history are the business courses and the tests set are those of the Business Educator's Association of Canada. Scientific farming, animal and field husbandry, agricultural English, bookkeeping and arithmetic are the courses in agriculture. Enrollment in any college qualifies the student to continue his studies in any other college.

The head of the entire movement in both England and France is Dr. H. M. Tory, President of the University of Alberta. Among the presidents are Capt. H. A. Kent from Dalhousie University, Nova Scotia; Major R. W. Brock from the University of B.C.; Major W. S. Wallace, an Oxford man from MacMaster University, Toronto; Lieut.-Col. F. P. Dory from Carnegie University, Pittsburgh and formerly of the University of New Brunswick.

Among the heads of the departments are other University professors, Rhodes scholars, lawyers, accountants, architects, engineers (including the one who was largely responsible for the mining at Messines) provincial and district superintendents of agriculture as well as teachers of normal and business colleges.

When the War is Over.

The registration fee is one shilling and his card admits the student to the library and classes in any area. If transferred his standing is marked on the card, showing work in classes and in examinations. Text books are furnished by the Y.M.C.A. and the price is returned when the book is handed back. A great many men, however, prefer to keep their books notwithstanding the inconvenience of carrying them in their pack. One often hears the expression "When the war is over"—and then follows a more or less imaginary account of the good and ill that will follow peace. In order to make a perfectly good prophecy the prophet will be compelled, in the future, to take into account the Khaki University.

Early Parenthood.

Early parenthood is productive of warriors, but not good brain workers, for, says Dr. Redfield, "when we look over those intellectually superior men who have done so much for the world's advancement we find them to have been predominantly the sons of elderly parents and only rarely the sons of men less than 25.

BEAUTIFUL RHEIMS.

The Erection of the Westminster of France Was Begun in 1212.

Rheims is, or was, the Westminster Abbey of France. A description of the edifice before the Huns commenced to shell it deliberately says: Its construction was begun in 1212, and it is one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in Europe. Six hundred statues adorn the triple portal of its western front, and over it is seen a gorgeous rose-window filled with exquisite amber-colored 13th century glass. The interior, also beautiful with rich old glass, is vast, but in perfect symmetry and majestic in the extreme. It contains magnificent tapestry (Gobelin was a native of Rheims); a clock with moving figures, one of the oldest in existence; and the flask of reputed holy oil which was brought from heaven by a dove to St. Remigius when he baptized Clovis, King of the Franks, in 496. This flask was smashed to atoms by a revolutionist in 1793, but appeared again at the coronation of Charles X., in 1825.

The city of Rheims is situated at the junction of the River Vesle and Aisne and Marne Canal, 85 metres east-northeast of Paris. It lies in a sheep-farming district, hence its important manufacture of woollens (especially merino and mixed silk and wool fabrics). It is also the headquarters for the production of champagne, an important railway junction, and the Metropolitan see of France. Its cathedral was its chief asset, but other notable structures are the Archbishop's Palace; the Romanesque Church of St. Remy or Remigius (1160-80), which contains the saint's tomb; and the Porta Martis, one of the old Roman gates of the city. Christianity became established here in the fourth century, and under Remy, who was its Bishop (459-533), Rheims first asserted its claim to be the coronation place of the Kings of France—a privilege abolished in 1830. Population (1901), 108,385.

The Two Little Flocks.

Five little sheep on a hillside grazed
Where the raggedest daisies grew;
And just overhead, in a sunny spot,
Were five little clouds in the blue;
And the five little clouds in the sky
Looked down
On the five little sheep below,
And called out to them, in a friendly way,
"O little white flock, hello!
We look alike—we must be alike;
Now isn't that plain to you?
Come up with us in the pasture sky—
O little white flock, please do!"
But the five little sheep on the hill
Looked sad,
And nibbled the grass instead;
And each one smothered a sorrowful sigh,
Shaking his wise little head.
And they called to the flock in the sky, "Oh, no!
Such a union would never do;
We must be fed on the greenest grass,
While your meadow-grass is blue,
And how would we look, when trying to fly
With hard little feet for wings?
Sheep of the earth and sheep of the sky
Were made for different things!"
And the little white flock in the sky
Looked down
On the white little flock below,
And they said to themselves, "How queer when we Resemble each other so!"

The Solution.

For two weary hours the small boy in the railway carriage had howled, and the occupants were getting tired of it.
"Oh, dear!" sighed the young mother, almost distracted. "What ever shall I do with the child!"
A gleam of hope shone in the eyes of the long-suffering traveller opposite.
"Shall I open the window for you, madam?" he inquired.

Health

Nosebleed.

Everyone knows what nosebleed is, but it may be interesting to learn what causes it or what it signifies. Owing to the fact that the mucous membrane that lines the nostrils contains a network of many small blood vessels that are close to the surface and that therefore are liable to slight injuries, nosebleed is a common trouble. It occurs most frequently in the young and is rare in middle life, but grows more common again in old age.

In children many causes are likely to excite it: a slight tap on the nose received in play, exertion in lifting, throwing, running, and so forth; mental excitement; congestion of the mucous membrane such as may come on when the child enters a warm room from the cold outdoors; a cold in the head; and a beginning illness, such as measles. In the adult it occurs chiefly as the result of injury or as an early symptom of typhoid fever or other infectious disease; it is not very uncommon, however, for a person who is suffering from a severe cold in the head to bleed a little when he blows his nose violently.

In most cases the blood comes from the lower and anterior part of the nasal septum, or partition that separates the nostrils—a spot that fortunately can be reached without difficulty, if it is necessary to make pressure in order to stop profuse or continued bleeding. If the bleeding recurs frequently, it is probably owing to a minute ulceration that opens into a blood vessel, or to a poor condition of the blood, which prevents it from coagulating firmly.

The treatment of nosebleed depends on its nature and cause. In ordinary cases the bleeding stops of itself in a little while; if it continues too long, the person afflicted with it may snuff up ice water in which a little salt is dissolved, or apply ice to the outside of the nose or to the back of the neck. If the bleeding comes from the front of the septum, pressure of the finger, maintained for a few minutes until a clot forms, will arrest it. The sufferer should keep as quiet as possible and should hold his head up. If nosebleed recurs again and again, have a physician look for the bleeding point. By touching it with some astringent, or by cauterizing it, he can usually stop the bleeding. If the sufferer is anaemic or run down, the doctor will prescribe tonics and a sustaining diet.

GIRLS! WHITEN SKIN WITH LEMON JUICE

Make a beauty lotion for a few cents to remove tan, freckles, sallowness.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply you with three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Squeeze the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle, then put in the orchard white and shake well. This makes a quarter pint of the very best lemon skin whiteners and complexion beautifiers known. Massage this fragrant, creamy lotion daily into the face, neck, arms and hands and just see how freckles, tan, sallowness, redness and roughness disappear and how smooth, soft and clear the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless, and the beautiful results will surprise you.

A hood suspended over the kitchen range and connected to the flue in the chimney will gather all the steam and odors and carry them away.

CANADA'S KHAKI UNIVERSITY

AN INSTITUTION OF FAR-REACHING INFLUENCE.

Keeps Before Our Soldiers the Idea of Higher Attainment in Peaceful Pursuits.

What is the Khaki University? Where is it? What does it teach? How can soldiers attend college in war time?

These and dozens of other questions literally pour forth the moment that "Khaki University" is mentioned. They will continue to be asked the world over, for a number of years, because the Canadian Khaki University is the crowning glory of the World's educational system. It does what every university and college and preparatory school must do if these are to prove of any value. It reaches the ordinary, every-day citizen and gives him a chance to acquire that which the average man values above everything else—an education along lines already studied or in entirely new fields.

Offsets Militarism.

The Khaki University does even more than that. It keeps the soldier from becoming captive, mentally, to Prussian militarism by reminding him constantly that while doing a soldier's duty he is still a lawyer, a skilled artisan, a man with a career in peaceful pursuits. It lessens the sacrifice which the soldier makes when he drops out of his usual line of work and falls behind his fellows who remain at home. These are the more or less intangible things accomplished by the University and no one can begin to measure the value of that peace offensive which Germany will have to meet after the war. A nation of men who have done their bit and come back intent on self-improvement is a standing army worth having!

The "what" and "where" of the University are briefly answered by saying that it is a series of colleges affiliated with Canadian Universities. The instructors are university men. The tests are approved in Canada, the credits are recorded in various Canadian universities and degrees given when earned. It is most interesting to note that where examinations have been given overseas the credits are far in advance of those attained in Canada from the same tests set by the same universities, or schools. Where instructors are working from pure love of the work and students are studying from the same motive one would be warranted in expecting just such results. As to lo-

GERMAN ATTACKS BETWEEN OISE AND AISNE MET WITH FAILURE

Grilling Gun Fire Forced Assaulting Troops to Fall Back Although Hospice Was Taken by Foe.

A despatch from the French Army in France says:—Continued attempts by the Germans to extend their lines on the Oise on Wednesday met with disastrous failure. They tried to get around Pont L'Evêque by crossing the Oise in the neighborhood of the northern-most point of Carlepont Wood, where the small hill, Montalagache, stands out like a bastion, but the French drove them back immediately they left the protection of their lines.

The sector between the Oise and the Aisne also found the allies very active. They are determined to hold this and are displaying the greatest energy in improving their positions, at the same time capturing small batches of prisoners, most of whom show signs of terrible fatigue and privation.

A despatch from the British Army in France, says:—An enemy attack against the French in the neighborhood of Locre on Wednesday night met with a repulse, although the Germans apparently succeeded in capturing Locre Hospice, which lies just south-east of the village.

The operation was a local one, with Locre as its objective.

The Hospice was gained after hard fighting, but when the assaulting troops tried to advance further they came up against such a grilling machine-gun fire and artillery fire that they were forced to abandon the attempt and fall back to the Hospice, which at the latest reports, they were still holding. This bit of ground, with the buildings, has changed hands innumerable times within the past few weeks. Locre and the Hospice lie well up on a slope which culminates in the important elevation known as Mont Rouge, to the west.

Numerous raids are being attempted by the Germans along the British front with the purpose of taking prisoners from whom the enemy, perhaps, hopes to learn whether the battle of the Aisne has brought about any change in the disposition of the allied troops.

Several raids were started last night. They proved costly failures. At 1 o'clock Thursday morning the grey coats essayed a raiding thrust near Morlancourt. They found the British ready. The Germans were repulsed with considerable losses.

POSITION OF ALLIES LEAVES LITTLE ROOM FOR MANOEUVRE

Must Fight Where They Stand But There is Not the Slightest Reason For Despondency.

A despatch from British Headquarters in France says: Between May 31 and June 3, the Germans made considerable progress between Noyon and Chateau Thierry, namely, four to five miles between Soissons and Chateau Thierry and one to two miles between Noyon and Soissons. Their attacks on the rest of the salient have been local.

On June 1 the enemy attacked with tanks south-east of Rheims in order to capture high ground, but the attack failed and the French regained the lost ground and captured four tanks. The Germans have hesitated to make a direct attack on Rheims, as it long had been prepared with various fortifications. The French have barricaded the streets and the underground defences would make the city very difficult to capture.

Except for the moral effect, the Germans would gain very little by the capture of Rheims unless they could drive the French back as far as the important railway junction on the high ground. Since June 3 the Germans have made only local efforts to capture the crossings of the Oise, the Aisne and the Ourcq. The French resistance has been much strengthened, and they have made important counter-attacks, capturing several hundred prisoners. The enemy's progress therefore, has been checked and the immediate danger is over.

There are some signs that the Germans intend to continue the frontal attack between the Marne and Montdidier, but these signs at present are indefinite and the Germans may still hope to thrust westward toward Amiens or other parts of the line. By retreating, our line has been lengthened, which is a disadvantage for us, as we are numerically inferior. Also, as we have several vulnerable points and fighting on the outer lines, we cannot keep such large reserves concentrated as can the Germans. We have to spread out our reserves more than we like, while the enemy can keep his concentrated for immediate use in attack. Moreover, we now have been driven so far back that we have not much room to manoeuvre and must fight where we stand. There is, however, not the slightest reason for despondency.

BRITISH CAPTURE STRONG POSITION

Carry Out Well Planned Attack West of Voormezele.

With the British Army in France, June 9.—British troops Saturday carried out a well planned attack west of Voormezele and captured a strong position held by the enemy. The operation was a minor one, but the defences secured greatly improved the allied line in this sector, which has been the scene of continual thrusts and counter-thrusts since von Hindenburg began his offensive in Flanders. About fifty prisoners were taken. The attack was launched at five o'clock and was successfully completed in a short time.

The German artillery was active last night between Givenchy and the Robecq and in the Givenchy sector the Germans attempted a raid, which was sharply repulsed. During the night the British conducted a raid of considerable size against the enemy trenches south of Beaumont-Hamel. The operation was entirely successful and thirty prisoners were brought back. In this same sector the Germans essayed a raid after a heavy bombardment, but were thrown back.

PLIGHT OF FOE AT ZEEBRUGGE

Entrance to Harbor Is Rapidly Silting Up and Channel Being Closed by Action of Nature.

London, June 9.—The plight of the Germans at the Belgian submarine base of Zeebrugge, in consequence of the measures taken by the British navy to blockade the port, is even more serious than has been believed heretofore. Photographs just taken from airplanes show that the entrance to the harbor is rapidly silting up, and that accordingly the British effort to close the channel is being reinforced by nature.

The sunken vessel inside the breakwater which was at first believed to be an enemy destroyer, now appears to be a large dredger. The loss of this ship evidently has crippled the Germans in their attempts to clear the channel.

STEFANSSON TO REACH VICTORIA THIS MONTH.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Word has been received by the Naval Department from Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, to the effect that he expects to reach Victoria early this month. Stefansson reported from Fort Yukon, where he had gone from Herschel Island, on recovering from an attack of typhoid. He and his party were ordered to return to civilization with their scientific collections, and detailed reports of new discoveries made during their four years in the Arctic. Stefansson intimates that he will probably give a short lecture tour on his return.

PLOT TO MURDER

BRITISH MISSION

In Spite of Fact That German Government Promised Safe Conduct.

A despatch from London says:—Circumstances surrounding the sinking of the Konigen Regentes are in the highest degree suspicious and suggest an atrocity from which it was thought even the Germans would shrink. The Konigen Regentes, the Sindorm and the Zealand sailed together—all Dutch ships having a safe conduct from the German admiralty and starting from Boston for Lincolnshire according to the agreement. The Konigen was the most comfortable ship of the three and the British commission of 11 persons going to Holland to confer with a German commission on the repatriation of prisoners of war would in the natural course of things have been expected to sail in her. But for some unexplained reason they went in the Sindorm.

The Konigen was sunk about 1 a.m., either by a torpedo or a mine when off the Dutch coast.

Accounts are incomplete, but the fact that the principal ship of a convoy, on which the British mission, including Home Secretary Cave, would ordinarily have been, was apparently torpedoed, and that the sailing of these ships and their routes were arranged with the German Admiralty, constitute, when taken in conjunction with what is known of the enemy's methods of warfare, a chain of circumstances urgently demanding explanation.

457,000 TONS BACON AND HAM REACH BRITAIN FROM AMERICA

A despatch from London says:—John R. Clynes, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Food, told the House of Commons on Thursday that no efforts of the German submarines, however severe, could menace the civilian population of Great Britain. He said that 457,000 tons of bacon and ham recently had been imported from America.

To aid in feeding the soldiers overseas eat more cereals, fish, potatoes and vegetables. It's patriotic.

A service was held in St. Paul's Cathedral in memory of the nurses who have fallen in the war.

BURDEN OF WAR WILL OUTLAST GENERATIONS.

A despatch from London says:—Right Hon. Bonar Law, in the course of his comments on the double income tax, said that the war was going to leave a financial burden which would outlast many generations. What would have to be considered was how each part of the Empire should bear its own burden, and, having regard for the immense natural resources of the dominions, he thought they would be better able to bear their share than the Mother Country would be able to bear hers.

AMERICAN MARINES ATTACK SUCCESSFULLY IN CHATEAU THIERRY SECTOR

Hold All Important High Ground and Captured Large Number of Prisoners.

A despatch from the American Army in Picardy says: American marines attacked the Germans at dawn on Thursday morning and gained 3½ miles over a four-kilometre front, and capturing 100 prisoners in the Chateau Thierry sector. The French, attacking at the same time on the left, took 160 prisoners.

The Americans now hold all the important high ground north-west of Chateau Thierry.

The marines again attacked at 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon and the battle is still raging.

The fight started at 3.54 o'clock on Thursday morning, and the Americans had attained all their objectives by 7.45 o'clock. The Americans have been pressing the Germans so hard that the enemy has been forced to throw three new divisions of his best troops in the line during the last three days.

Soon after the attack of Thursday morning the Americans carried Hill 142 (about two-thirds of a mile south of Torcy), the highest point in this vicinity and swept on and stopped at the foot of a wheat field on the other side, from where they raked the Germans with machine guns. One entire enemy machine gun company was almost annihilated. The Germans had donned French uniforms, but the Americans, forewarned, poured volleys of fire into them. One German soldier had 32 wounds. Among those captured were two officers.

There has been no let-up in the offen-

A despatch from London says: sive of the American and French troops against the Germans in the region north-west of Chateau Thierry, where in the past two days severe defeats have been inflicted on the enemy.

Battling shoulder to shoulder over a front of six miles from Vinly, which lies just to the north-west of Veully-le-Poterie, to Boursches, the Americans and French have captured the towns of Veully-le-Poterie and Boursches and also made progress all along the front. Previously Torcy had fallen into the hands of the Americans.

Nowhere on this battle line have the Germans been able to stay the efforts of the allied troops.

A despatch from the American Army in Picardy says: As the result of the two attacks by the Americans against the enemy in the second battle north-west of Chateau Thierry, 300 prisoners were captured and the Americans extended their line over a front of about six miles to a depth of nearly 2½ miles.

While the losses of the Americans necessarily have been heavy owing to the nature of the fighting, the German dead is piled three deep in places. A number of machine guns were added to the American booty.

The German prisoners taken by the Americans, many of whom were mere boys, had only been in the line for two days. Some of them wore the white bands of the Prussian Guard

ENEMY RESUMED OFFENSIVE ON TWENTY-MILE FRONT

French Make Desperate Resistance Against Foe Attack Between Noyon and Montdidier With Paris as Objective.

London, June 9.—The armies of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria again are hitting the allied line in a new offensive, with Paris' apparently their objective. Between Montdidier and Noyon, over a front of about twenty miles, preceded, as usual, by a heavy bombardment with shells of all calibres and with noxious gases, the enemy's initial manoeuvre evidently has in view the bending back of the allied front toward the town of St. Just, on the northern wing, and toward the railroad junction of Compiègne on the southern flank, getting astride the Oise River and driving south-west toward the French capital.

The French troops are resisting the impact with their wonted valor. The Germans, on their right, and in the centre, have been able to penetrate the line for distances ranging from two-thirds of a mile south of Montdidier to relatively two and a half miles at Reims-sur-Matz in the centre. Thence to Noyon, however, the allied line is holding strongly.

With the British Army in France, June 9.—Thus far the attack launched by the Germans this morning against the French between Noyon and Montdidier has developed no conjunctive operation on the British front, though heavy bombardments last night and early to-day against the British right gave promise for a time of a more extensive enemy offensive. It may be that for the moment the German high command is content with a southerly drive between Montdidier and Noyon, with the idea of capturing Compiègne with its railways and straightening out the salient which the enemy has driven into the French front between Soissons and Rheims.

It would be unsafe to predict at this juncture that attacks would not boil up further north. Certainly von Hindenburg has for a considerable period had his effectives ready for a drive against part of the British front.
